CLOSER LOOK: No match for a few of these in a G3 at BAQ May 9, though in his defense it was his first start in a couple months and a slow start nullified his speed; bounced back well in DEL slop May 27, however, a sharp 2nd that looks even better when you note the 1st and 3rd finishers both came right back to win; back to a place he loves and he's been a pro for a long time; hey, you don't win 12 of 21 by accident; that said, he's facing likely tougher than he faced in NY, including the reigning sprint champ; but do es love for this place give him enough of a boost?

Continues his good form; yes, he was dull at BAQ May 3 but that came vs. some toughies and dueling from the start didn't help; bounced back nicely subsequently at DEL to win a sprint stakes; loves this distance and while it's his first time here he's handled numerous places so odds are he'll handle this place; trouble is, the reigning sprint champ is to his immediate right but at least a few triple-digit Beyers give him a puncher's chance should 'Danno not bring his 'A' game.

Reigning sprint champ is no doubt the one to beat, not only because of talent and form but that this is home (3 for 3); looked in a bit of trouble turning for home at SAR last time but once Paco got him going he reeled in G1 BC Sprint winner Bentornato and rolled on past; likely doesn't need to be at his best to win this, though it's not like he's facing a bunch of patsies; bullet work here July 9 says he holds his edge.

Considering he was no match for $25K claimers last time at BAQ this certainly seems a reach; still, new connections claimed him and toss him right into these much deeper waters so they apparently saw something they liked; worked briskly here July 11; eve n so, it's not as if he's been at his best here (6-1-2-0) and if you think "Danno will get toppled don't some others seem more plausible?"

Stalked in a DEL stakes June 13 but tired to end up last of 7, well behind runner-up and today's foe Quint's Brew; must not only deal with him but the reigning sprint champ; that said, there's back-class here as he's a G3 SW and multiple GSP so on his da y he's got some game; that said, his last 2 weren't too hot making you wonder if age (he's 7) and all those furlongs (50 starts) are starting to take a toll.

Super G2 SW in Dubai March 28 as he left some top dudes in his wake; but what do we expect now as he was then eased in a G1 at CD Ky. Derby day and hasn't run since?; at least it's nice they feel good enough about him to bring him back in a spot like and he's ben working steadily for this return; but even if he comes back full tilt and has shown sprint talent he likely is better with a bit more ground so could this be a launching pad to something a bit longer that he would prefer?

After a long layoff he came back to be 2nd in a stakes here June 7, but let's face it, he was never a threat to a big winners; it's also a bit alarming the Beyer came back so light; the good news is when he won here last Sept. 6 he posted a Beyer that wo uld at least give him a puncher's chance; still, that fig has been more the exception and not the rule and he's yet to face this caliber, even if "Danno wasn't present.

Kept to his task to pass a few and get 2nd in a nice optional claimer here; still, that effort and a string of Beyers in the 70s leave him with a lot of work to do if he's to have a say; at least figures to keep coming and seems to like it here; and heck , even if 'Danno is too much you need someone to fill out those minor slots in the exotics, right?

Pretty tough ol' dude; continues his decent form and he pretty much gives his all every time; that said, a couple of today's foes beat him in his last pair; in his defense, those were his first 2 starts off a layoff; figures fit with those 2 outings under r his belt; figures to stalk and keep to it, but with his Beyers having tailed off in those last 2 you wonder if he's the same guy we saw prior to the vacation. -Michael Hammersly
